

Everybody makes mistakes!

It happens to the best of us: Maybe you were busy, the lab was under pressure, and communication suffered, or maybe you were transitioning into a more computational field and relied on techniques you thought you understood, only to later learn that you put out work that was lacking in rigor. It's embarrassing, but if we want academia to improve for the betterment of all of us, it's important that we acknowledge and communicate that such mistakes happen.

With that in mind, C4R has set up this confession box for everyone to anonymously submit past mistakes they've made for others to learn from. Replies are posted on the C4F Confession Box Twitter page.

Got something to get off your chest? Share it anonymously below.

Is it okay if we post this (anonymized) on our Twitter?
